Historical Sketch: The Lorain School of Technology was a forerunner of Lorain County Community College. It was run by the Lorain City Board of Education. Ohio law permitting community colleges passed in 1961. As a result, Lorain County set out to open a community college and incorporated the existing technical school. The first president of LCCC, Dr. Max Lerner, was also the director of the Lorain School of Technology.

Scope and Content Notes: These records are a varied collection of items. There is a catalogue for the year 1963, apparently the last year of the Technology School's existence. One follow-up study in the collection includes information on graduates from both the Community College and the Technical School.

Arrangement of Records: The five varied folders do not lend themselves to any arrangement nor is it necessary.
